AIDS awareness program tonight:

Alpha Phi Omega, a service fraternity, is sponsoring an AIDS awareness program in conjunction with Fear No People Week for its National Service Day.

"Every year Alpha Phi Omega has a specific project in conjunction with its National Service Day," said Jane McCann, vice president of service of the fraternity.

Three speakers will be talking to students about AIDS at separate forums which will occur simultaneously from 7-8:30 p.m. tonight, according to McCann.

David Vaillencourt, residential services program coordinator, will be speaking to students in Kreischer Quadrangle's Compton Hall.

Stacy Pettit, a resident adviser in Founders Quadrangle, will be talking to students at Founders Keepers dining hall.

Christine Licht, residential services house director, will be speaking to students in McDonald North.

Also present will be speakers from David's House in Toledo. David's House is an organization which helps people who have AIDS.

"We just feel that everyone needs to know more about AIDS and the preventative measures for it. We want to help make [the community] aware," said Molly Lyon, a member of the fraternity's service committee.

"We would like to thank RSA, the Student Wellness Center and the American Red Cross for helping us with this AIDS awareness project," McCann said.

Gore and Perot debate NAFTA tonight:

WASHINGTON -- After days of hype and hoopla, when Vice President Al Gore and Texas Ross Perot square off tonight over the North American Free Trade Agreement the arguments are likely to be as familiar as the faces.

The stakes are high as the White House tries to debunk NAFTA's loudest critic in its struggle for the votes to pass the trade agreement with Mexico and Canada.

The great debate between Gore and Perot isn't a debate in the formal sense at all. "Discussion" might be a more accurate description, although "free-for-all" is the favored phrase of those who expect things to get a bit unruly.

The program is on CNN's "Larry King Live" and only 60 percent of the nation's households receive the cable network.

On a good night, King's audience is about one percent of the nation's TV-viewing households.

Glover honors James Baldwin

The BG News/Teresa Thomas

Danny Glover, a distinguished film actor visits Bowling Green State University in Kobacker Hall Monday evening as a part of the Ethnic Studies conference honoring James Baldwin. Glover made a speech to a full house in a tribute to Baldwin. Baldwin wrote several novels about the relationships between blacks and whites.

Film actor claims author's book serves as inspiration

by Kirk Pavelich and Julie Tagliaferro
The BG News

Renowned film actor Danny Glover highlighted the start of the University's tenth annual ethnic studies conference "A Tribute to James Baldwin" Monday night in Kobacker Hall.

Glover, known for his roles in the "Lethal Weapon" trilogy as well as "The Color Purple" and "Places in the Heart" read some of his favorite pieces of the works of Baldwin and poet Langston Hughes as part of the "Crossroads to the 21st Century" conference.

Baldwin, who died in 1987, wrote several novels and plays based on the relationships between blacks and whites in the United States, including "The Fire Next Time" and "Harlem Quartet."

According to Glover, Baldwin's "The Fire Next Time" -- the first book he ever really read as a teen -- served as an inspiration for him growing up in San Francisco.

"There were certain things that I felt -- and someone else felt those things. There were certain questions that were rising and James Baldwin's work allowed me to interpret those things," Glover said. "I'm a product of the Civil Rights movement. When I grew up, I saw people being hosed and people fighting for something they felt was important."

"I was moved by that. What James did was put that in some sort of content," he added.

Glover related a story of the time he happened to meet Baldwin on the streets of New York City. Even though he had gained some degree of notoriety from his own acting career, Glover said he was still speechless when he actually encountered the source of his inspiration.

"The one thing I didn't say to him which I wish I did was 'I love you Jimmy,'" Glover said. "Hopefully my being here tonight is redeeming in some way. Hopefully I will in some way be saying, 'I love you Jimmy.'"

Baldwin first became acquainted with the University when he presented a lecture in 1977. He later went on to teach courses and become a writer-in-residence the following year.

While Glover paid tribute to Baldwin, he also read selections of Hughes' poetry in order to correlate the contributions of the two men.

Included among the selections were: "One Way Ticket," "Sylvester's Dying Bed," "Harlem 1944" and "I Dream a World." Throughout the readings, Glover became caught up in the performance and said he found it difficult to find a stopping point.

"You can't just read Langston for a minute," Glover said. "There ain't no time limit. My man is timeless."

Glover said the thing he admired most about the two men was their desire to provide a description of a better and more equal world for all races.

"These two incredibly rich visionaries -- whatever they wrote about, they created a better world to live in for everyone. A world of shared love and commitment to justice," he said.

Following the readings, Glover fielded questions from the sell-out audience. Among the issues he addressed were the importance of education, communication and self development.

USG to conduct Cleveland cuts Kosar

Quarterback loses job after chaotic season

The Associated Press

by Larissa Hritsko
student government reporter

In an effort to focus more on student issues and concerns, the Undergraduate Student Government will implement a phone survey beginning Nov. 15 to ask students their feelings on current USG issues.

Phone Power, the USG student survey, plans to survey between 4,000 to 9,000 students through 10 to 15 survey sessions this year. Several trained USG cabinet members, senators and volunteers will survey students throughout the year, said Jason Jackson, USG president.

The more students who are surveyed, the more valid the results will be concerning what students want and what they think about present USG issues, Jackson said.

The purpose of Phone Power is mainly to give USG the opportunity to ask vital questions to students about USG's proposals and enable the callers to respond to any student concerns, Jackson said.

The results of the survey, which provide USG with students' input on what they want, can be quite beneficial to the organization, Jackson said.

"The survey provides us with the direct opportunity to put forth our constituents' needs to forefront the tangible knowledge [acquired from the survey] without guessing," Jackson said.

Phone Power also has two positive results, he said.

"Phone Power will first bring students into the decision-making process and second the survey will get USG members directly involved in with the students," Jackson said.

The process of the survey is a three to five minute phone conversation with a trained volunteer, USG senator or cabinet member selecting the tenth person on each page of the University Phone Directory, Jackson said.

It is important that all USG members become involved in this survey. USG senators and cabinet members along with USG volunteers were trained for the student surveys, said Shae Massengill, director of Phone Power.

After the data is gathered, it is then computerized and analyzed by professionals, including faculty members, to determine if the results are representative of the students or are invalid, Jackson said.

Massengill said she thinks the survey will prove to be extremely valid to the organization in determining students' concerns.

"The survey will help students become aware of what is happening with USG and in turn students will have the opportunity to give their input on current USG legislation, which is geared to improve students' environment," Massengill said.

BEREA, Ohio -- The Cleveland Browns cut Bernie Kosar Monday, ending a short and stormy relationship between the long-time starting quarterback and coach Bill Belichick.

Kosar, who agreed to a non-guaranteed, seven-year, $26 million extension of his contract five weeks ago, had been benched by Belichick in favor of backup Vinny Testaverde, who was signed as a free agent during the summer.

When Testaverde separated his shoulder last month, Kosar returned to the starting lineup for one game. Belichick still wasn't happy with him, saying it was apparent Kosar's physical skills had diminished over the years.

"We've all seen him play," Belichick said. "I'm not going to badmouth and bash Bernie. He's done too much for this organization."

Belichick said the team would sign another quarterback this week. Todd Philcox, who has started only one game in four years, will start Sunday at Seattle, backed up by recently resigned Brad Goebel.

Kosar completed 79 of 138 passes for 807 yards with five touchdowns and three interceptions this year.

He started the Browns' first five games, but was relieved by Testaverde in the second half of three of those. Testaverde then became the starter for two

"It was unanimous [among the coaching staff] that we should go in a different direction. It was a painful experience for Bernie and myself. I can't say enough about Bernie Kosar. Bernie Kosar has been like a son to me."

Art Modell, owner of the Cleveland Browns games before separating his shoulder Oct. 24 against Pittsburgh.

Kosar came back as the Browns' starter Sunday in a 29-14 loss to Denver. He completed 16 of 30 passes including a pair of touchdowns to Michael Jackson, but he was sacked six times.

"It was unanimous [among the coaching staff] that we should go in a different direction," owner Art Modell said. "It was a painful experience for Bernie and myself. I can't say enough about Bernie Kosar. Bernie Kosar has been like a son to me. He contributed to this organization the likes of which haven't been seen since the 1960s."

Under terms of the NFL's collective bargaining agreement, any veteran player waived after eight games is entitled to one game check of up to $20,000. Although Kosar's contract paid considerably more than that, the $20,000 will serve as his termination pay.

Modell declined to discuss financial details.

"The contract relationship with me and Bernie is private," Modell said.

Kosar has become increasingly outspoken about the Browns' sluggish offense in recent weeks, and it became apparent that he and Belichick disagreed completely on the types of plays the team should run.

Kosar wanted to be able to call audibles and throw deep more frequently; Belichick insisted on a more conservative approach, based on the running game, play-action passes and rollouts -- an offense suited for a more mobile quarterback, such as Testaverde.

"I think it has been a distraction in recent weeks," Modell said. "It impacted negatively on the team."

Kosar, 29, was picked by the Browns in the supplemental draft in 1985 after leading the University of Miami to the national championship in 1983.

The pick allowed him to return home. Kosar grew up in Boardman as a fan of the Browns, always dreaming to play quarterback for the NFL team.

Until this season, he had started all but two games since coming to Cleveland. He led the team into the playoffs in each of his first five seasons, winning four division titles and went into this season with the Browns' highest all-time completion mark of 58.9.

ALA warns of poisonous gas

by Leah Barnum
environment reporter

Carbon monoxide is a colorless, odorless, poisonous gas with the potential to kill that may be in your home.

The American Lung Association will warn people about the dangers of carbon monoxide poisoning and provide test kits to concerned people through Project CO, an awareness campaign taking place Nov. 8-12.

Facts about carbon monoxide poisoning and how to test homes for carbon monoxide will be broadcast on the 6 p.m. news on WTOL-TV 11. Viewers may call in and ask questions, according to Sarah Russell, executive director of the Northwest Ohio branch of the American Lung Association.

Carbon monoxide is caused when heating systems are incorrectly installed or when they do not receive the annual maintenance to keep them properly ventilated, Russell said.

Problems also develop when people do not use their equipment correctly. Russell said many people try to use gas grills indoors during the winter and they try to save money on heating bills by leaving the doors to their hot ovens open.

"We hope to prevent injury or possible death because of [carbon monoxide poisoning]," Russell said.

The most common symptoms of carbon monoxide poisoning are severe headaches and nausea, said Joshua Kaplan, director of the University Health Service.

Other symptoms include dizziness, blurred vision, fainting, loss of muscle control, fatigue, a rapid heart beat or tightening of the chest and chest pain, Russell said.

Carbon monoxide poisoning is the cause of 3,000 to 5,000 deaths per year and contributes to 50 percent of all fatal poisonings in the United States, Russell said.

However, carbon monoxide poisoning is not a severe problem in the Bowling Green area.

The Wood County Hospital gets some patients with carbon monoxide poisoning occasionally, but it is not prevalent, according to a nurse from the Wood County Hospital who did not wish to give her name.

The Student Health Service has only had one reported case of high levels of intake of carbon monoxide in the past four years, Kaplan said.

The student lived in an apartment in Bowling Green that had an improperly ventilated heating unit, he said.

Because the University is state-funded, buildings are typically constructed according to code and have the necessary annual maintenance checks, Kaplan said.

Since the buildings are less likely to have ventilation problems which may lead to carbon monoxide poisoning, students living on campus are not typically exposed to high levels of carbon monoxide in their living units, Kaplan said.

However, if there was an injury and carbon monoxide was the probable cause, it would be investigated by the University's department of Environmental Health and Safety, according to Dan Parratt, director of the office.

Although the American Lung Association is unaware of the severity of the problem of carbon monoxide in Northwest Ohio, they did a similar project in the Cleveland area last year and sold 35,000 test kits, Russell said.

This week they anticipate selling about 10,000 test kits to people in Northwest Ohio.

New apartments cause concern

by Tara Stubbs
general assignment

Some Bowling Green residents -- including a county commissioner -- are voicing concerns about an apartment complex that may soon be built on South Main Street near Wal-Mart.

Neighbors have said they believe the new complex, which will house 400 people, will cause traffic problems. They have also asked that the developer build a six-foot privacy fence to keep apartment residents off their property.

ARV Housing, a California-based company, is contracting to develop the 120-unit complex just south of Wal-Mart. If approved by the city, work on the complex could begin sometime in late January or early February.

"Work on the new complex could begin by the end of January or the beginning of February, but this is pure guess," city Planning Technician Rick Ketzenbarger said.

Patrick Daniels, a vice president for ARV, said the apartment complex will consist of townhomes with 80 percent of the apartments being two- and three-bedroom and the remaining apartments being single-bedroom.

The apartment complex will be able to house approximately 400 new residents.

Daniels said federal and state housing tax credits will be used to help build the new complex, so the company will have to restrict its rental rates.

Daniels said the company believes the apartment complex will be attractive to perspective tenants since it will be built beside the relatively new Wal-Mart. But nearby property owners said they are concerned the complex may disturb the neighborhood.

County Commissioner Alvin Perkins, who lives at 602 East Gypsy Lane, said he is concerned about increased traffic flow and possible problems with storm drainage.

Perkins said Wal-Mart has increased traffic congestion and said he fears a new apartment complex would cause more accidents.

Perkins also said storm drainage pipes are not large enough to handle rainwater flow. Currently, Four Meadows, a housing complex in the Wal-Mart area, stores excess water on its property.

Perkins said he has a problem with trespassers who want to use his fishing pond.

"People stop along Route 6 and come across the back fence," he said.

He said he is worried about liability if someone were to fall in his pond.

Sue Ellen Hayhurst and her husband own property south of the proposed site.

They said because they have two ponds and raise horses, they are worried about the safety of small children living in the proposed complex.

"We keep and board horses, small children are attracted to horses," Hayhurst said.

Hayhurst and Perkins said they would like to see a privacy fence constructed around the complex.

The city's planning commission will have an open hearing Dec. 6 at 304 Church St. to listen to arguments for and against the development of the new complex.

Cleveland Browns quarterback Bernie Kosar throws a pass during a 1991 game. Kosar was cut by the Browns Monday.

Cleveland says bye, bye Bernie

The Associated Press

CLEVELAND -- Cleveland Browns coach Bill Belichick has some convincing to do among fans, who lambasted the third-year coach Monday for firing quarterback Bernie Kosar.

It was the last move in a season-long skirmish that pitted Kosar -- whose big-man-on-campus good looks and nice-guy image endeared him to legions of Browns fans -- against Belichick, perceived as gruff, stubborn and unwilling to give up total control.

"I think it's a Belichick thing," said Pam Patterson. "I liked Belichick until it started getting into the press that those two were having problems, and then I got a little concerned about Belichick."

"I'm disappointed. I liked Bernie. I think he's a great quarterback, one of the smartest quarterbacks out there," said Patterson, a 29-year-old fan who had stopped by a sports memorabilia shop to find out if rumors of Kosar's departure were true.

"I always liked him. I've always been a Bernie Kosar fan. Belichick? I don't know," said Jeff Griffy, 31, of Cleveland.

Belichick was pilloried on the city's sports-talk radio shows. On WKNR-AM, calls were running about 3-to-1 against Belichick and Browns owner Art Modell.

"They're the villains in the minds of the fans," said producer Bill Johnson.

"It's a great shock to people," Johnson said. "The last time there was a shock as big as this was when the Indians traded Rocky Colavito [in 1960]."

Near the Browns' training facility in suburban Berea, news of the firing was just beginning to spread Monday afternoon.

"I go to a couple games a year but I don't think I will any more. I don't like Belichick and Modell," said Karl Truhan, 32, of Berea.

Kosar had started the Browns' first five games, but was benched in favor of backup Vinny Testaverde in three of those games.

Cincy still looking for first win

The Associated Press

CINCINNATI -- The Cincinnati Bengals have settled into a pattern. They play well enough to get a lead and then -- WHAM! -- give it up in the most exasperating ways.

Quarterbacks overthrow open receivers in the end zone. Receivers drop balls on critical plays. Ball carriers fumble without being touched. The kicker misses a decisive extra point. Defensive backs somehow leave receivers uncovered for easy touchdowns.

Those things have happened over and over in a season that is setting franchise records for futility. The Bengals are 0-8 for only the third time in their 26 years, and don't play a team with a losing record for five weeks.

The most noteworthy thing about this winless team is the way it's gone 0-for-1993. The Bengals have been blown out only once; they've been in position to win six of the eight games.

All they have is a half-dozen examples of folding under pressure. The best example is the latest -- blowing a 16-point lead Sunday at home in a 24-16 loss to Pittsburgh.

"That's been the case most of the season," coach Dave Shula said. "It's now five of the eight when we've had the lead or been tied at the half. We're not getting it done in the second half. That's particularly disturbing."

The Bengals, who have the NFL's least-expensive and least-experienced payroll, play like a bunch of rookies when the game's on the line. They stop blocking, tackling, throwing, catching and kicking.

"I think that the guys somehow have to just go out there and get people stopped or make plays," Shula said. "Somebody's got to go out there and take charge."

Sounds simple. But nothing's simple for this team.

On Sunday, they turned two turnovers by Neil O'Donnell into the 16-0 lead with just 3:50 left in the first half. Then, they let O'Donnell throw two touchdown passes to make most of the lead vanish before the half.

A blown coverage assignment left safety Darryl Williams man-on-man against Eric Green. The tight end faked one way, turned up field and was wide open for a 71-yard touchdown play that turned the game around.

Swimmers split over weekend

by Marty Fuller
sports writer

The BG swim team started out its dual meet season by splitting victories with Notre Dame and Wright State University.

The men's club and the women's club seemed to be on two different courses this weekend. The men defeated Notre Dame and lost to Wright State while the women were victorious over the Raiders but dropped their meet with the Fighting Irish.

Sophomore Jason Loch lead the way for the men's squad on Friday night with a strong showing in the diving competition. Loch won the 3m event by a score of 187.82 to 169.42 and then edged out his Irish competitor in the 1m event 202.32 to 196.97.

McCulloch

"Jason scored more points for us in this meet than he did all last year," head coach Brian Gordon said.

Gordon was pleased with the win but didn't think his team was aggressive as they should have been.

"We had a good lead at the mid-point but we slacked off and let them back in it," Gordon added. "A few of our swimmers swam too comfortably; we need to complete the job."

The job the women's team completed against the Irish left some room for improvement. They swam a close meet with Notre Dame but went home with the loss.

In four of the first five swimming events the women lost by touch outs of 1.27 seconds in the 400 medley, 1.19 seconds in the 200 free, .11 seconds in the 50 free and .31 seconds in the 200 individual medley.

One of the bright spots for the women's club was freshman Alicia Kelso. Kelso celebrated her birthday Friday by shaving time off of her life time best in the 200 breaststroke.

"Overall," said Gordon "the women are not as bad as they showed, but they are not as good as they hoped to be."

Saturday's meet against Wright State was a different story for the women as they squeaked by the Raiders 127 to 116.

Freshman Michelle Pilling set the pace for the Falcons with a first place finish in the 1000 free-style and a second place finish in the 200 butterfly behind her teammate, junior Amanda Applegate.

"We showed a lot more support for each other on Saturday," Pilling said. "We knew we had to get out of our slump so we really got up for this meet."

The men were also pumped up after their victory on Friday, but couldn't catch up to Wright State
